Albert Einstein Academy and Gratz Jewish Community High School of the Brandywine Valley to share School Leadership Team

July, 2 2007 – The Boards of Albert Einstein Academy and Gratz Jewish Community High School of the Brandywine Valley (Gratz), both unanimously passed resolutions unifying the schools' administration teams, combining the administrative strengths of both schools.

Under the direction of Dr. Jack L. Sparks, Head of School of The Albert Einstein Academy, Gratz will expand course offerings while continuing to provide quality education, opportunities for service and creating community in a stimulating, diverse, flexible and inclusive environment. Students of Gratz have experiences that enable them to realize success in a collegiate environment. Many go on to become an integral part of their academic communities while maintaining strong ties to the Jewish community.

Through the mission to cultivate a feeling of belonging and loyalty and a sense of responsibility to the Jewish people, our students develop positive adult identities and learn to be involved in both local and global Jewish issues. Gratz programs fully engage students and challenge them to seek out wisdom in every corner of their daily life. Gratz programs have been committed to providing educational opportunities that meet both the intellectual and emotional needs of our student for more than 40 years.

"The concept of combining administrative talent has been discussed for almost a decade within the community", former Gratz Board president Sharon Rosen recalls, "we are delighted that both schools will now benefit from pooling professional talent, community resources and a broad vision of Jewish education within the Brandywine Valley Jewish Community.
